Spring is a time for renewal

It's that time of the year. Spring is still more rumor than fact, but the signs of change and renewal are not hard to find. Birds that we haven't heard in months are singing everyday, a prelude to the nesting season that is to come. Small green shoots, hidden until recently under a blanket of snow are beginning to emerge.

Rocky River land may be preserved

The Land Conservancy is working with a property owner, Medina Township and a state agency to preserve 91 acres off Fenn Road along the banks of the West Branch of Rocky River.

The property contains high-quality wetlands and habitat for several rare species.

The property, which has been labeled the Medina Marsh Preserve, is home to two threatened birds – the Red-Headed Woodpecker and the Northern Flicker, both on the Audubon Society Watchlist – and a rare moth that has been found only one other time in Ohio.

The Skullcap Skeletonizer Moth had never been spotted in northern Ohio before it was seen on the Medina Marsh property by Judy Semroc of the Cleveland Museum of Natural History.

More than a third of the land – some 32 acres – is rated as high-quality wetlands.

The Land Conservancy holds an agreement to purchase the property but will do so only if the project is funded by the Ohio EPA's Water Resource Restoration Sponsor Program.

The site, which is between the City of Medina's 226-acre Reagan Park and Medina County Park District's 41-acre nature preserve, would add to a growing corridor of protected land along the West Branch of the Rocky River.

He helps others see the value of nature

As a boy, he had free run of Sleepy Hollow Lake, a family owned campground and outdoor recreation park in Medina County's Brunswick Hills Township. His dad, now-retired Brunswick Safety-Service Director Greg Crane, and grandfather encouraged him to explore nature, while mother Linda, a teacher at Brunswick's Memorial Elementary School, volunteered for the Medina County Park District at nearby Plum Creek Park.

"I had access to the outdoors, so I could do so many of the things you should do as a kid," Crane said.

Cochran receives conservation honor

Rich Cochran, who started as the lone employee of what is now Western Reserve Land Conservancy and now heads an organization that has preserved nearly 23,000 acres in northern Ohio, has been named the recipient of the 2010 Conservation Award by The Cleveland Museum of Natural History. Cochran, the president and CEO of the Land Conservancy since 1996, was honored during an awards ceremony. He was presented with the award on behalf of the Museum's Board of Trustees.

Good news: Tax incentives renewed

The Land Conservancy is applauding the renewal of a federal tax incentive for private landowners – especially working family farmers – who protect their land with a voluntary conservation easement.

The Land Conservancy endorsed the move by Congress to renew the incentive, which had expired at the end of 2009. The tax incentive has helped the Land Conservancy work with willing landowners in our community to preserve about 23,000 acres of productive agricultural lands and natural areas.

Conservation-minded landowners now have until December 31, 2011 to take advantage of a significant tax deduction for donating a voluntary conservation agreement to permanently protect important natural or historic resources on their land. When landowners donate a conservation easement, they maintain ownership and management of their land and can sell or pass the land on to their heirs, while foregoing future development rights. meeting hosted by Copley Feed & Supply and the Summit County Farm Bureau, more than 40 people learned about donated easements and potential income and estate tax benefits. They also heard about the Agricultural Easement Purchase Program or AEPP which is administered by the Ohio Department of Agriculture and pays cash to qualifying farmers for the value of their development rights.

A similar program was held in Medina and hosted by the Land Conservancy, the Medina Soil and Water Conservation District and Ohio's Office of Farmland Preservation. The focus again was on potential tax benefits and cash payments for development rights.

In between these meetings, the Land Conservancy mailed postcards to landowners throughout our service area. They served as a reminder that at the end of 2010, Congress extended enhanced tax benefits to people who preserve their land through donated conservation easements.

These tax benefits and easement purchases can be financially significant. But they can sometimes mask the true motivation of many landowners for protecting their land. In conversations following the meetings and in response to our postcard mailing, it was apparent that many people were already committed to protecting their land. Their reasons were familiar. Some people understood their generation was the last one with a legitimate opportunity to protect their land. In many cases, subsequent generations were separated from the land by distance and interest. Other landowners were motivated by a desire to honor those that came before them, or perhaps as a gift to future generations. In most cases, it was simply the right thing to do.

Regardless of motivation, it will be our pleasure to work with those who make lasting gifts to the landscape of our region.

Crane

Today, Crane, president and owner of TGC Engineering in Granger Township, is helping give others the same opportunities he had as a child. Crane just started his second three-year term as a Medina County Park District commissioner and completed his first year as a member of the Land Conservancy's Medina Summit Chapter.

Crane became acquainted with the chapter through his friendship with Land Conservancy Trustee Jeff Holland.

"I had access to the outdoors, so I could do so many of the things you should do as a kid."

"I think the two missions (of the park district and the Land Conservancy) really go hand in hand," Crane said.

Crane, who has a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from Lafayette College and a master's degree in civil engineering and construction management from Clemson University, started his company in 2001.

The firm does civil engineering, surveying, land development, stream restoration work, storm water management and environmental projects.

Crane and his wife Ruth, who have been married for 15 years, have three sons, Ryan, 12, Ben, 9, and Gavin, 4. They live in Granger Township.

The park district was formed in 1965 and opened its first park in 1972. It currently manages approximately 5,100 acres, about two-thirds of which were acquired since 1995.

A hayride attracted participants of all ages.

NEWS FROM

THE LAND CONSERVANCY

'Conservation Rocks' is May 21

Mark your calendars for May 21, when the Land Conservancy will stage its second "Conservation Rocks" concert at Cleveland's Beachland Ballroom and Tavern. This year's event will feature musicians who also work in the field of conservation in northern Ohio, including our own Pete McDonald (pictured).

Visit www.wrlandconservancy.org for more information.

Two join Land Conservancy

Director of Development Robert Koonce and Manager, Corporate and Foundation Relations Erin Gay are the newest members of the Land Conservancy team. Robert, a Cleveland native, and Erin, who is from Houston, both worked for University Hospitals Health System before joining the staff.

Koonce Gay

In addition to a wealth of fundraising experience, Robert brings a love of the outdoors and a sense of humor. He and his family live in Cleveland Heights.

Erin, who lives in Shaker Heights, was a senior communications specialist at UH before joining us. Her work here will combine her passions for writing and the environment.

Moreland Hills mulling HQ plan

The Land Conservancy is seeking permission from the Village of Moreland Hills to put an addition on a Chagrin River Road home and move its headquarters there. The property is adjacent to the village's Forest Ridge Preserve and across the street from the Cleveland Metroparks Polo Fields. We will keep you posted as the project progresses.

Our mission, our vision

Western Reserve Land Conservancy seeks to preserve the scenic beauty, rural character and natural resources of northern Ohio. We want to help create a network of interconnected natural areas, working land and green space throughout the region. We envision northern Ohio as a stunningly beautiful and healthy place to live, work and play.
