

Jeffery A. Schiffman

Jeffery is a Conservation Project Manager with Western Reserve Land Conservancy and has been with the organization since September 2011. He is responsible for coordinating multiple land protection transactions including the creation of timelines, budgets, and funding schedules.

Prior to joining the Land Conservancy, Jeffery was an attorney with the Cuyahoga County Treasurer's Office where he focused on the foreclosure of vacant and abandoned properties for land banking purposes and also served on the county's Tax Incentive Review Committee. He also has prior work experience in site acquisition and zoning for the wireless industry and product management for an internet-based company. He has an undergraduate degree from Miami University and graduate degrees from the University of Notre Dame, the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law, and the Cleveland State College of Urban Affairs.

Jeffery grew up in Oberlin and currently resides in Shaker Heights with his wife and son.
